Presentation of the documentation of tombstones on the later Jewish cemetery Detmold

Natanja Hüttenmeister, Salomon-Steinheim-Institute

The documentation is now available online via database 'epidat' (http://www.steinheim-institut.de:50580/cgi-bin/epidat?id=dtm). The cemetery, where also tombstones of the former cemetery can be found, reflects nearly 300 years of Jewish history in Detmold. In this lecture the results of the documentation will be presented and put into the context of the general Jewish cemetery culture as, for example, the development of grave designing, the meaning of symbolism and the structure and content of Hebrew inscriptions.

Between Gods and Demons E Martin Stephani and National Socialism

Prof. Hans-Walter Schmuhl, Bielefeld University

Between 1959 and 1982 Martin Stephani was principal of the then 'North-West German Conservatory Detmold'. During the Second World War he held various functions in the musical branch of the 'Waffen-SS' (a particularly militant branch of SS). His first posting since 1941 was with the 'Leibstandarte SS Adolf Hitler', a kind of personal lifeguard, and subsequently in the SS Command Centre ('SS-Führungshauptamt). On the occasion of Stephanis 100th anniversary the rectorate of the conservatory decided to investigate into his life. Professor Schmuhl, an expert for the Nazi era, is now able to present a detailled picture of Stephani's activities in the 'Third Reich' and after 1945.

The synagogue parish of Bösingfeld during the Weimar Republic and National Socialism

Jürgen Hartmann

Jürgen Hartmann shows with the example of the village of Bösingfeld that the population did not have to be urged 'from above' to make the life of the Jewish citizens a living hell. Simultaneously to the surprisingly early rise of the NSDAP in these parts anti-semitic assaults increased; formerly well-respected human beings became targets of insults and physical attacks.
